Universal Declaration of Human Rights
Adopted and proclaimed by the United Nations General Assembly resolution 217 A (III) of 10 December 1948

Preamble
Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world,
Whereas disregard and contempt for human rights have resulted in barbarous acts which have outraged the conscience of mankind, and the advent of a world in which human beings shall enjoy freedom of speech and belief and freedom from fear and want has been proclaimed as the highest aspiration of the common people,
Whereas it is essential, if man is not to be compelled to have recourse, as a last resort, to rebellion against tyranny and oppression, that human rights should be protected by the rule of law,
Whereas the peoples of the United Nations have in the Charter reaffirmed their faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person and in the equal rights of men and women and have determined to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,
Whereas Member States have pledged themselves to achieve, in cooperation with the United Nations, the promotion of universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms,
Whereas a common understanding of these rights and freedoms is of the greatest importance for the full realization of this pledge,

The European Convention on Human Rights

(Summary)

Under the Convention, which was signed in Rome on 4 November 1950 and came into force in 1953, the States Parties guarantee the basic civil and political rights of a state governed by the rule of law, not only to their own citizens but to all persons “within their jurisdiction”. States or individuals can bring a complaint before the Court set up by the Convention. However, the Convention is not necessarily incorporated into each state’s national legal system. The theory of international law whereby human rights have a fundamental character placing them above the legislation and practices of sovereign states is thus brought into practice.

The rights guaranteed

The right to life (Article 2)
Article 2 protects the individual against death inflicted arbitrarily by the State; but it does not exclude the use of the death penalty if carried out in accordance with the law. Protocol No. 6, abolishing the death penalty in time of peace, was adopted in 1985. A new protocol, abolishing death penalty is being prepared.

The right to liberty and security of person (Article 5)
Article 5 guarantees people physical liberty by protecting them from arbitrary arrest and detention and according them certain basic procedural rights. Its provisions are extended by Article 1 of Protocol No. 4 which prohibits imprisonment for debt.

The right to a fair trial in civil and criminal matters (Article 6)
This right is complemented by Article 13, which ensures the right to an effective remedy before a national authority. Article 6 includes the condition that the proceedings must take place within a “reasonable time”. Complaints of violations of this provision are those most frequently brought by applicants. The notion of a fair trial is completed by the principle that criminal law should not be retroactive (Article 7), the right of appeal in criminal cases, the right to compensation for wrongful conviction, and the right not to be tried or punished twice for the same offence (Articles 2, 3 and 4 of Protocol No. 7).

Respect for private and family life, home and correspondence (Article 8), which may be linked to the right to marry and found a family (Article 12).

The equality of rights and responsibilities of spouses during marriage (Article 5 of Protocol No. 7).

The right to freedom of expression (including freedom of the press) (Article 10)

Rome, 4.XI.1950

The text of the Convention had been amended according to the provisions of Protocol No. 3 (ETS No. 45), which entered into force on 21 September 1970, of Protocol No. 5 (ETS No. 55), which entered into force on 20 December 1971 and of Protocol No. 8 (ETS No. 118), which entered into force on 1 January 1990, and comprised also the text of Protocol No. 2 (ETS No. 44) which, in accordance with Article 5, paragraph 3 thereof, had been an integral part of the Convention since its entry into force on 21 September 1970. All provisions which had been amended or added by these Protocols are replaced by Protocol No. 11 (ETS No. 155), as from the date of its entry into force on 1 November 1998. The European Social Charter (brief presentation)

A Council of Europe Treaty safeguarding Human Rights

The European Social Charter (referred to below to as “the Charter”) sets out rights and freedoms and establishes a supervisory mechanism guaranteeing their respect by the States Parties. It was recently revised, and the 1996 revised European Social Charter, which came into force in 1999, is gradually replacing the initial 1961 treaty.

The appended table shows which countries have currently signed and ratified the Charter.

Rights guaranteed by the Charter

The rights guaranteed by the Charter concern all individuals in their daily lives:

Housing:
- construction of housing in accordance with families’ needs;
- reduction in the number of homeless persons;
- universally assured access to decent, affordable housing;
- equal access to social housing for foreigners;

Health:
- accessible, effective health care facilities for the entire population;
- policy for preventing illness with, in particular, the guarantee of a healthy environment;
- elimination of occupational hazards so as to ensure that health and safety at work are provided for by law and guaranteed in practice;

Education:
- a ban on work by children under the age of 15;
- free primary and secondary education;
- free vocational guidance services;
- initial and further vocational training;
- access to university and other forms of higher education solely on the basis of personal merit;

Employment:
- a social and economic policy designed to ensure full employment;
- the right to earn one’s living in an occupation freely entered upon;
- fair working conditions as regards pay and working hours;
- action to combat sexual and psychological harassment;
- prohibition of forced labour;
- freedom to form trade unions and employers’ organisations to defend economic and social interests; individual freedom to decide whether or not to join them;
- promotion of joint consultation, collective bargaining, conciliation and voluntary arbitration;
- the right to strike;

Social protection:
- the right to social security, social welfare and social services;
- the right to be protected against poverty and social exclusion;
- special measures catering for families and the elderly;

Movement of persons:
- simplification of immigration formalities for European workers;
- the right to family reunion;
- the right of non-resident foreigners to emergency assistance up until repatriation;
- procedural safeguards in the event of expulsion;

Non-discrimination:
- the right of women and men to equal treatment and equal opportunities in employment;
- a guarantee that all the rights set out in the Charter apply regardless of race, sex, age, colour, language, religion, opinions, national origin, social background, state of health or association with a national minority.

European Committee of Social Rights

The European Committee of Social Rights (referred to below as “the Committee”) ascertains whether countries have honoured the undertakings set out in the Charter. Its twelve independent, impartial members are elected by the Council of Europe Committee of Ministers for a period of six years, renewable once. The Committee determines whether or not national law and practice in the States Parties are in conformity with the Charter (Article 24 of the Charter, as amended by the 1991 Turin Protocol).

A monitoring procedure based on national reports

Every year the states parties submit a report indicating how they implement the Charter in law and in practice. Each report concerns some of the accepted provisions of the Charter.

If a state takes no action on a Committee decision to the effect that it does not comply with the Charter, the Committee of Ministers addresses a recommendation to that state, asking it to change the situation in law or in practice. The Committee of Ministers’ work is prepared by a Governmental Committee comprising representatives of the governments of the States Parties to the Charter, assisted by observers representing European employers’ organisations and trade unions.

A collective complaints procedure

Under a protocol opened for signature in 1995, which came into force in 1998, complaints of violations of the Charter may be lodged with the European Committee of Social Rights.

Organisations entitled to lodge complaints with the Committee

- In the case of all states that have accepted the procedure:
  1. the ETUC, UNICE and the IOE;
  2. Non-governmental organisations (NGOs) with consultative status with the Council of Europe which are on a list drawn up for this purpose by the Governmental Committee;
  3. Employers’ organisations and trade unions in the country concerned;
- In the case of states which have also agreed to this:
  4. National NGOs.

The complaint file must contain the following information:

- the name and contact details of the organisation submitting the complaint;
- proof that the person submitting and signing the complaint is entitled to represent the organisation lodging the complaint;
- the state against which the complaint is directed;
- an indication of the provisions of the Charter that have allegedly been violated;
- the subject matter of the complaint, i.e. the point(s) in respect... of which the state in question has allegedly failed to comply with the Charter, along with the relevant arguments, with supporting documents.

The complaint may be submitted freely on the basis of the above, or using a form. It must be drafted in English or French in the case of organisations in categories 1 and 2 above. In the case of the others (categories 3 and 4), it may be drafted in the official language, or one of the official languages, of the state concerned.

The Committee examines the complaint and, if the formal requirements have been met, declares it admissible.

Once the complaint has been declared admissible, a written procedure is set in motion, with an exchange of memorials between the parties. The Committee may decide to hold a public hearing.

The Committee then takes a decision on the merits of the complaint, which it forwards to the parties concerned and the Committee of Ministers in a report, which is made public within four months of its being forwarded.

Finally, the Committee of Ministers adopts a resolution. If appropriate, it may recommend that the state concerned take specific measures to bring the situation into line with the Charter.

Effects of the application of the Charter in the various states

As a result of the monitoring system, states make many changes to their legislation or practice in order to bring the situation into line with the Charter. Details of these results (and current developments) are described in the “Survey”, published annually by the Charter Secretariat (see below).

Where to find out more about the Charter

- the Charter database http://hudoc.esc.coe.int/, which can be accessed online or on CD Rom, makes it easy to find out about the case-law of the European Committee of Social Rights;
- the Charter website www.esc.coe.int contains, in particular, all the national reports and country-by-country fact sheets;
- the “Survey”, published annually, shows the extent to which each country’s domestic law complies with the Charter;

Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities

(Summary)

The Convention is the first legally binding multilateral instrument concerned with the protection of national minorities in general. Its aim is to protect the existence of national minorities within the respective territories of the Parties. The Convention seeks to promote the full and effective equality of national minorities by creating appropriate conditions enabling them to preserve and develop their culture and to retain their identity.

The Convention sets out principles relating to persons belonging to national minorities in the sphere of public life, such as:
- Non-discrimination
- Promotion of effective equality
- Promotion and preservation of culture, religion, language and traditions
- Freedom of peaceful assembly
- Freedom of association
- Freedom of expression
- Freedom of thought, conscience and religion
- The right to access to and use of the media,
- Freedoms relating to language and education
- Transfrontier contacts and co-operation
- Participation in economic, cultural and social life
- Prohibition of forced assimilation.
The European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages

The Charter, drawn up on the basis of a text put forward by the Standing Conference of Local and Regional Authorities of Europe, was adopted as a convention on 25 June 1992 by the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe, and was opened for signature in Strasbourg on 5 November 1992. It entered into force on 1 March 1998.

1. What purpose does the Charter serve?

The Charter is a convention designed to protect and promote regional and minority languages as a threatened aspect of Europe’s cultural heritage. Its overriding purpose is cultural. It covers regional and minority languages, non-territorial languages and less widely used official languages. It is intended to ensure, as far as is reasonably possible, that regional or minority languages are used in education and in the media, to make possible and encourage their use in legal and administrative contexts, in economic and social life, for cultural activities and in transfrontier exchanges.

The Charter is based on an approach that abides by the principles of national sovereignty and territorial integrity. It does not conceive the relationship between official languages and regional or minority languages in terms of competition or antagonism. Development of the latter must not obstruct knowledge and promotion of the former.

Definitions

As defined by the Charter, “regional or minority languages” are languages traditionally used within a given territory of a state by nationals of that state who form a group numerically smaller than the rest of the state’s population; they are different from the official language(s) of that state, and they include neither dialects of the official language(s) of the state nor the languages of migrants.

The expression “non-territorial languages” means languages used by nationals of the state which differ from the language(s) used by the rest of the state’s population but which, although traditionally used within the state’s territory, cannot be identified with a particular area thereof.

Eight fundamental principles applicable to all languages

(Part II, Article 7)

- Recognition of regional or minority languages as an expression of cultural wealth.
- Respect for the geographical area of each regional or minority language.
- The need for resolute action to promote such languages.
- The facilitation and/or encouragement of the use of such languages, in speech and writing, in public and private life.
- The provision of appropriate forms and means for the teaching and study of such languages at all appropriate stages.
- The promotion of relevant transnational exchanges.
- The prohibition of all forms of unjustified distinction, exclusion, restriction or preference relating to the use of a regional or minority language and intended to discourage or endanger its maintenance or development.
- The promotion by states of mutual understanding between all the country’s linguistic groups.

2. What commitments do states enter into?

The Charter is divided into two main parts, a general one containing the principles applicable to all the Parties and all regional or minority languages (Part II), and a second part which lays down specific practical commitments, which may vary according to the state and the language (Part III).

Part II sets out the main principles and objectives underlying states’ policies, legislation and practice, and regards as providing the necessary framework for the preservation of the languages concerned.

Part III serves to translate the general principles set forth in Part II into precise rules. The rules relate to education, judicial authorities, administrative authorities and public services, the media, cultural activities and facilities, economic and social life and transfrontier exchanges. States undertake to apply those provisions of Part III to which they have subscribed.

Firstly they have to specify the languages to which they agree to this part being applied, and then they have to select at least thirty-five undertakings in respect of each. A large number of provisions consist of several options, of varying degrees of stringency, one of which has to be chosen “according to the situation of each language”. The parties are encouraged subsequently to add to their commitments, as their legal situation develops or as their financial circumstances allow.

3. How can the honouring of commitments be guaranteed?

The Charter provides for a monitoring system enabling state parties, the Council of Europe and the general public, to follow and observe its implementation.

a. States’ reports

States have to submit three-yearly reports to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe, explaining their policies and the action they have taken to fulfill the commitments they have undertaken. These reports are published and may be obtained from the states concerned and from the Council of Europe.

b. The report of the committee of independent experts

The Charter makes provision for a committee of independent experts to be established, comprising one member for each contracting party, appointed by the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe from a list of individuals of the highest integrity. The committee of experts is responsible for examining states’ periodical reports, as well as any other information from associations and other bodies legally established in the state concerned and with an interest in the field of languages. The committee prepares and forwards to the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe a report of its own, including proposals for recommendations to be made to states.

c. The recommendations issued by the Committee of Ministers to states

Once it has considered the committee of experts’ report, the Committee of Ministers may decide to take the necessary action to bring their policies, legislation and practice into line with their obligations under the Charter.

d. Monitoring by the Parliamentary Assembly

Once every two years, the Secretary General of the Council of Europe has to present to the Parliamentary Assembly a detailed report on the application of the Charter. This ensures that the members of Europe’s parliaments are kept informed about application, enabling them to bring political pressure to bear if necessary to encourage national governments to take appropriate measures.

e. The role of the NGO

NGOs must be regarded by states as preferred partners in the pursuit of the shared aim of promoting language diversity. Their role is decisive, both before and after ratification of the Charter. Prior to ratification, they may assist states to choose the languages concerned and the provisions of part III that they wish to apply within their territory. Their role in the monitoring of the honouring of commitments is to advise the committee of experts and the national authorities of any problem that may arise when the Charter is implemented in states.
